

NOW THAT I AM

I can skip and hop.
I like to dance.
I can keep time to music.
I have good balance, so I don't fall down often.
I can copy my name.
I can concentrate on something I'm really interested in for 10-15 minutes.

I can handle a fork well. I am beginning to use a knife for spreading items such as jelly.
I can dress myself and am able to button, snap, zip and buckle.
I can put my shoes on, but I need help tying.
I can even put on gloves, but sometimes I have to be reminded that gloves go on last.
I can run errands to a neighbor or to the classroom next door.
I like to act grown up.

My feelings are hurt easily.
Most of the time I feel like I just have to be right.
I have special friends and my playmates are one of the things I like best about school.
I can play with a group of two to five children happily. We can plan and build things together.
I can carry over an interesting idea for more than one day.
I love to play dress-up.

I don't quarrel as much. It's a little easier for me to share my things, but I like to have some things that are just for me.
I still like to roughhouse and fight at times. I can be quite protective and helpful to a younger child.
I'm beginning to know that printed letters stand for objects.
I like to look at pictures, talk about them and notice details.
I like to make up my own stories.

I know most colors.
I can listen to a story eight to ten minutes.
I can understand what things are made of.
I know the names of money.
I can remember three orders (directions) and follow them through, one after the other.
I can finish what I start.

BUT REMEMBER:

I AM ME AND I LEARN BETTER WHEN I'M ALLOWED
TO LEARN THINGS AT MY OWN PACE! 😊
